Taking God Into Partnership By-ORISON SWETT MARDEN.

"What discovery in twenty turies," says Dr. Abel T. Allen, "compares with this, that man has learned to tap the universal mind, the infinite reservoir of his own soul and thereby reate health, ability, character, or any other quality he may desire!"

Henry Ward Beecher said that think ing is creating with God. Yet how few of us realize even today that we cannot think without creating, and that if we think rightly we are creating with

This conception of God makes us artners with Him, and when we realize the divine co-operation in our lives we think as "we," not "I."

We now know that man is like partner in an enormous concern. His resources are not limited to his own little capital. He can draw upon the firm as long as there is anything to draw. We are all God's partners, and our capacity for creation depends very largely upon our consciousness of our divine partnership.

When man discovers his identity with spirit he begins to manifect creation on his own account. No longer a passive instrument, tool, or chessman in the cosmic life, he becomes a center of creative power in himself.

When you realize your divine parttership, it will enlarge your life and multiply your effectiveness, because it will take away from you all sense of uncertainty, all feeling of inability to buffet with the storms of life, ill sense of hopelessness in the presence of overwhelming odds. It will give a new meaning to living because you will know that you are not a victim of fate, but that your life is founded upon infallable fundamental principles.

It is the great God force working with and through them, this divine copartnership, that has enabled men in every age to accomplish the "impossible." The divine plan is back of the Mrs. Harry Harwood Rousseau and telephone, back of wireless telegraphy, back of electricity, the automobile, the airship, back of the phonograph, every invention that has helped the world along its upward path.

As a matter of fact, when a man invents or discovers that which benefits his fellow man, whether he acknowledges it or not, it is because the cre ative force in him is co-operating with the divine force in the universal intelligence which is everywhere present.

It is the creative force of divinity in Edison that has produced these mar-Mary Morris Ambler will be at home to-

The Bridge Across.

When the only channel of work which opened to The Man was of a totally uncongenial anture, be wavered in his faith that those who keep the commandments of Christ shall "abide in His love."

Until he saw The Job sa The Bridge Across.

Being a Christian in a little more than the letter of the law, The Man looked to God to keep His promise that all things work together for the good of those who love Him.

He never knowingly broke the Golder He never knowingly broke the Golden Rule; he kept the commandments of the Christ and felt the truth of His assurance that those who achieve this thing shall "ablde" in His love.

At which time, like a blow in the face, The Man lost his job.

sented an aspect of double disaster.
But, after a little, he perked up his courage and looked around to see what he might do, sure that other channels would open for him a better way than the business path he had left.

He was offered only a position which necessitated traveling two-thirds of the time.

"The one thing I don't want to be, he told The Little Lady who accompanied him through life. "The one thing and come to the belief that nothing is for which I am not fitted. "Then whittle away the edges of the peg," suggested the still small voice of Reason, ise of the working together of all things for good unto those who love Him.

"There may come a time when your business opportunities will be enlarged by your victory over your shrinking from strangers, your conquering of the present situation. To lie down on the job at hand is the part of a coward," argued Reason in voice so firm and practical that upon The Man there dawned a light. a light.

Nevertheless The Man accepted the traveling position.

He had to, since there opened for him no other channel, which quite upset his theories concerning the harmony of life for the man who lives in the Christian way.

So he went forth to the new work with rebellion in his heart, dreading the unfamiliar things along the way.

And it was as he had predicted. His distaste of foreign environment and his shrinking from strangers was such a handicap to his work that, for a time, it looked as if The Man was doomed to fallure in the new undertaking.

Realizing that it was so he greater thing that is to be, so I've made up my mind to conquer my elementary tastes that have been an obstruction thus far to my success."

So it came about that The Man put on the whole armor of God; set out with a new unerstanding of the distasteful work; gradually worked out of his innate shrinking from strangers until he could meet them with assurance.
